To Whom It May Concern:

I am very upset at the prospect of businesses depositing voice Mail (VM) on my phone without my permission. I own my iPhone and pay for the AT&T service to allow me to connect to their network.

I also pay $2.99 per month for NoMoRobo to block unwanted calls from reaching my phone. This works reasonably well, blocking about 90% of the calls. I am on the DO NOT CALL list, but this does not seem to do any good.

Why should I, a consumer, have to pay for a service to block calls that the government already says are not allowed?

I have already turned off my home phone line, which became unusable after telemarketers constantly rang my phone all day. I have literally removed all the landline phones, even though I must still pay for the service as part of my Verizon bundle.

To Summarize: Despite the DO NOT CALL list, the telemarketers have made my home phone unusable. Now business are asking the FCC for permission to do the same to my iPhone.
